Go to Google.com

Identify the problem:

I want to access the Google search engine in order to search for information or use one of its services.

What do I need to know to answer the question:

In order to access Google.com, I need to know how to open any web browser, type in the correct URL in the address bar, and my internet should be up and running.

I am going to open my browser, such as Chrome, Safari, Firefox, and confirm that it has internet access. Then, type "www.google.com" in the address bar and hit Enter.

Organize the data:

Upon typing "www.google.com" in the browser's address bar, this is the cue for it to connect to the Google server and load the homepage. The URL directly leads to the Google website.

Present:

Upon loading, I can start using the Google search bar to search for anything I need or access other Google services like Gmail or Google Maps.

To go to Google.com, I will open my web browser, type in the address bar "www.google.com," and press Enter. This will take me to the Google homepage, from where I can search for information or use other Google services. If needed, I can bookmark the page for quick future access.
